Humans are the creatures who are pretty good at using associative memory method. In order to remember less and store more useful, we can create a knowledge net in our brain. Then we can get what we want quickly by going through key knowledge nodes. Life become easier if only we master well the basic skills on the path between nodes. When we accept new knowledge, a new node will be created and links will be made by the inner or outer relationship between them. Once the new knowledge are mastered well by us, the node will become messenger.

All of us is have strong desire for victory. However, if we do not control it, life will become tense and nervous. Especially when we stuck at the deadly infinite loop, we may feel loss for a long time when failure comes. For this failure, there is big possibility since we are always in competing and comparing with others. What's worse, it can be the biggest disadvantages when others make use of you desire for winning. For me, I should not argue with others to prove me or him to be right or wrong. It is very stupid!
